

Lycamobile in Switzerland

Lycamobile is a swiss mobile phone provider. they re-sell pre-paid plans on the swisscom network and therefore provide a very good coverage.

calls within switzerland are ridiculously expensive, but calling a foreign company is very cheap.

another thing that is also very cheaply available from them is a 1GB/month internet package for only around 14.- Swiss Franks per month. they don't provide the full speed of the swisscom network, but if you are in a remote area and the main goal is to have any connection at all, they are probably quite a good choice for that.

on my HTC Wildfire S phone, activation of the datapackage was not so simple.. first i received a message that i will receive the APN settings soon and that i should accept them, but the settings never popped up. so i had to enter those settings manually:

apn: data.lycamobile.ch user: lmch pass: plus secondly i could not activate the package with their code that they had active to do so.. the reason being, after entering the code a question popped up and asked for another code, only i didn't have another code.. it turned out that in the second field i should just enter "1" to complete the allowance procedure for the activation. so just enter 1 and hit ok :)
